Did you know...

Wet Behind The Ears.

This American idiom probably dates from around the turn of the nineteenth century. It can refer to a newborn baby, so inexperienced as to be still wet, but the most common reference is to newborn farm animals.

Some say that the last place to dry on a newborn calf or colt are the indentations behind their ears.

Week one of the new Winter Menu starts on Monday 26th of August.

Please place any orders by Thursday lunchtime.

Bon Appetit!
